

Power Outage

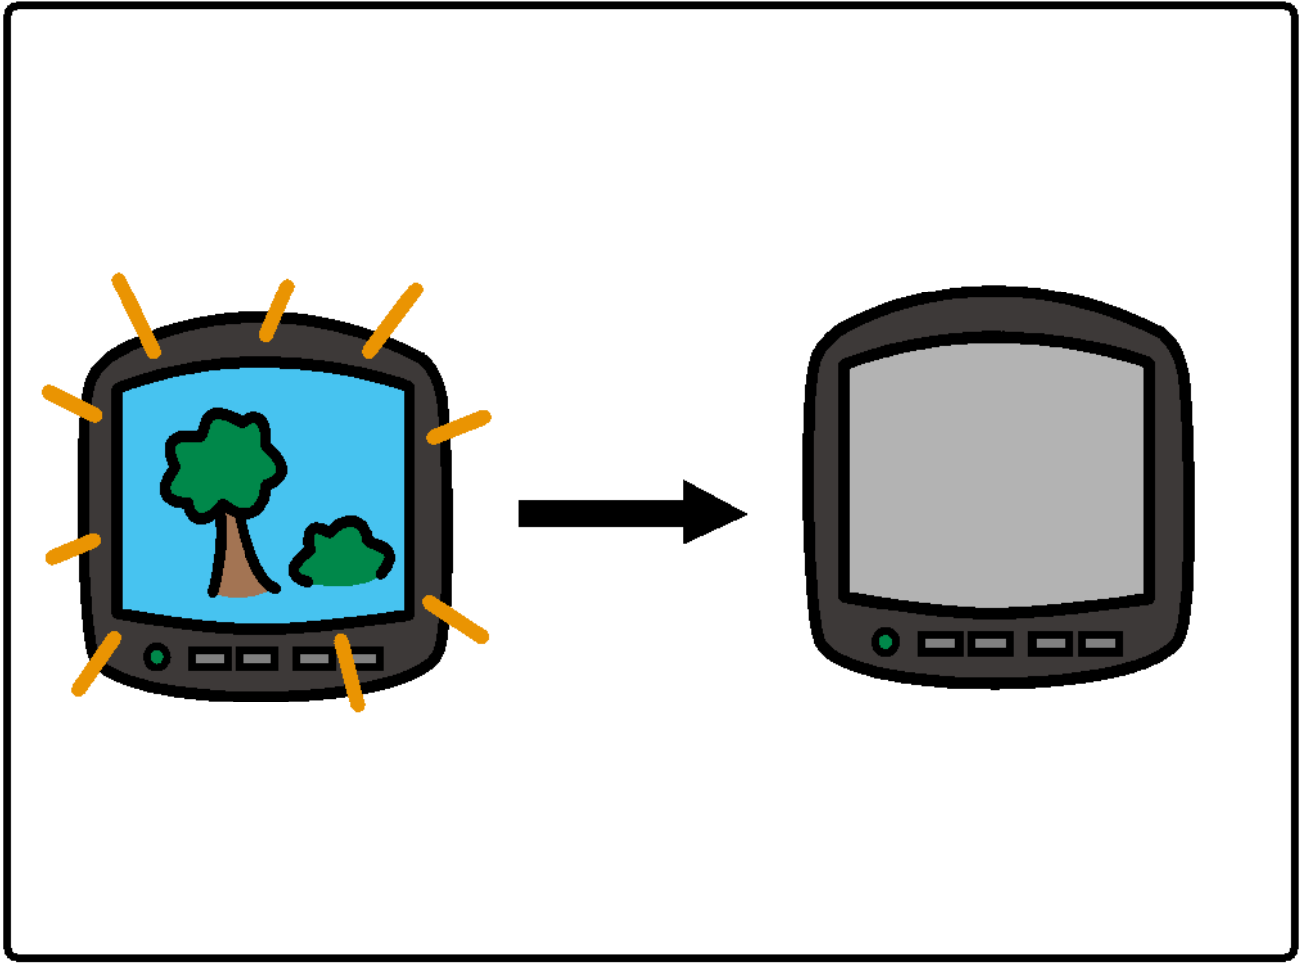

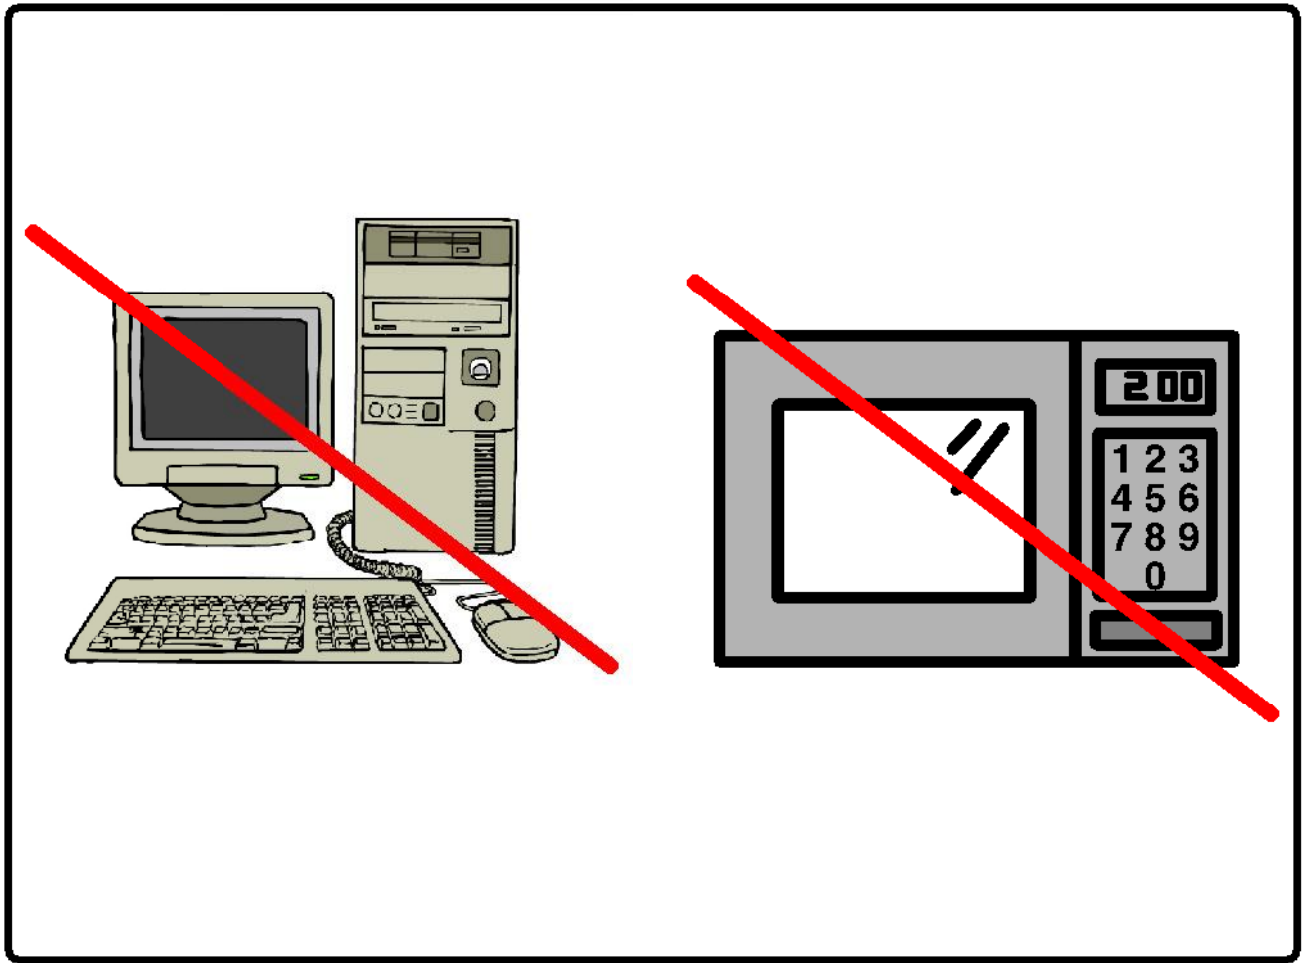

Sometimes the power goes out at home or at school. That means anything that needs electricity will not work.

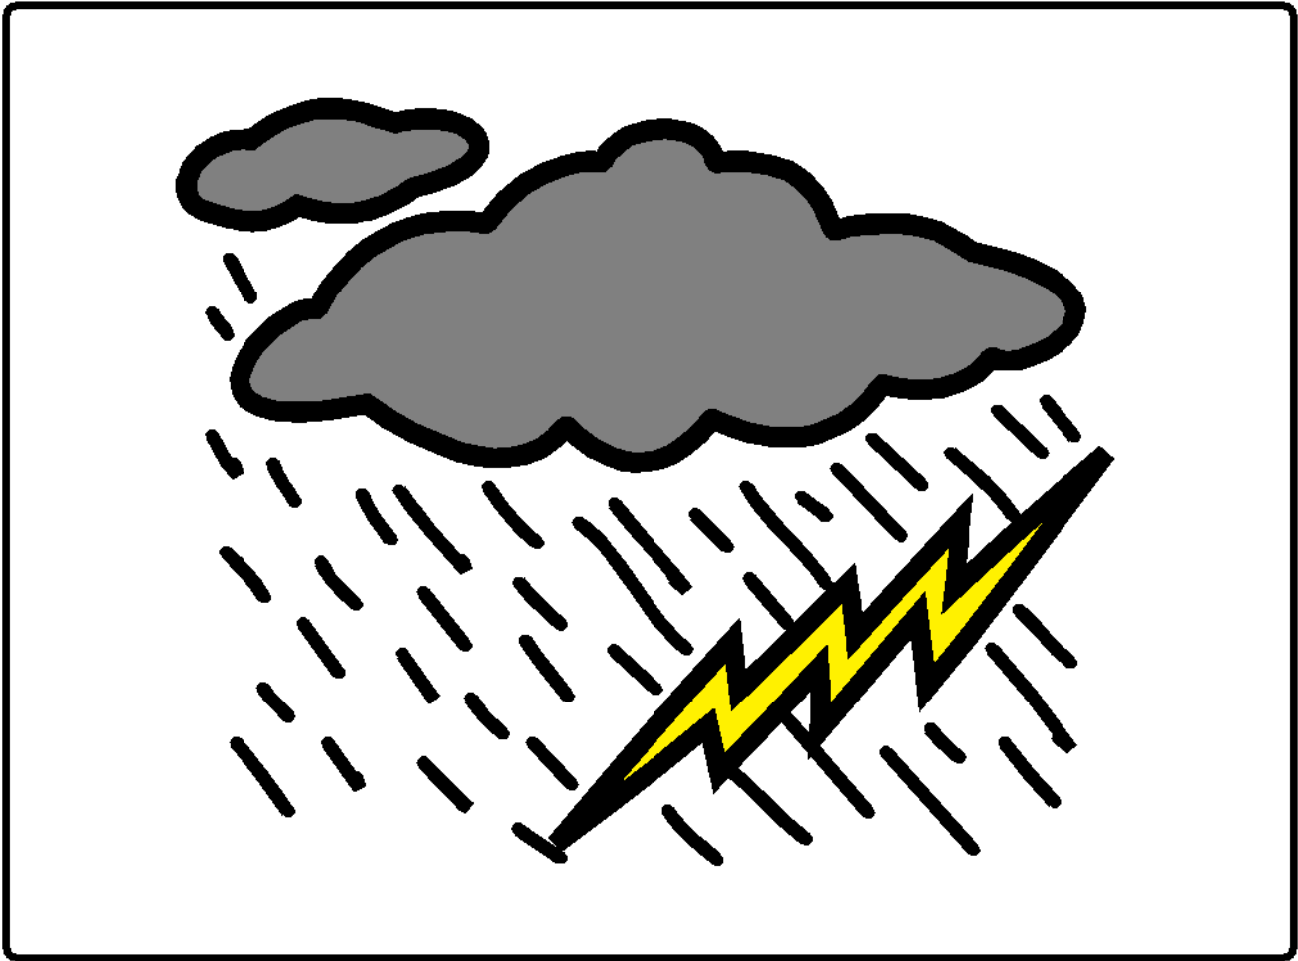

The lights will not work.

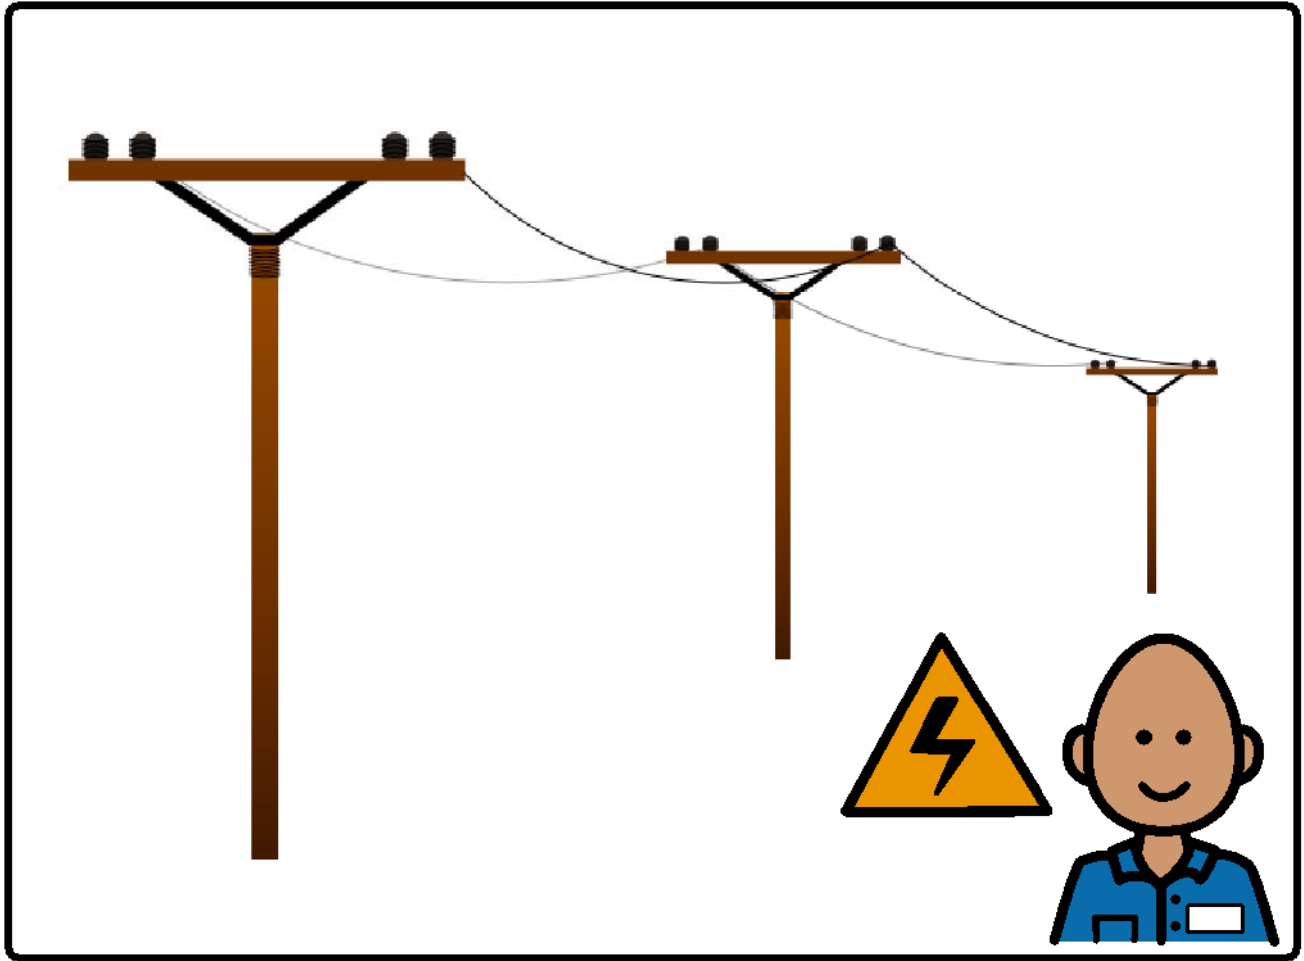

The TV won't work.

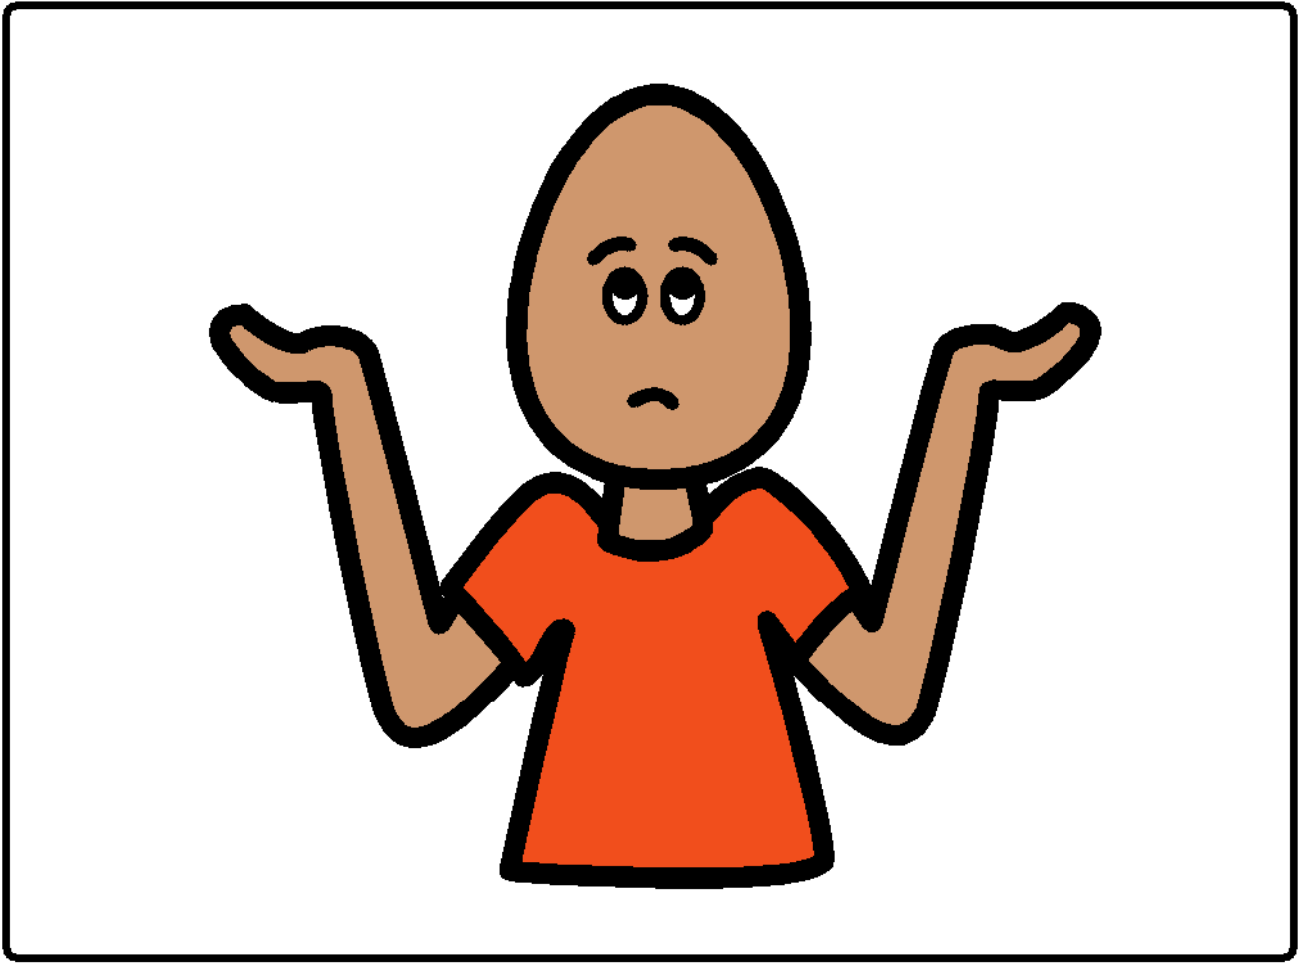

The computer and microwave won't work. Anything that you plug in will not work without electricity.

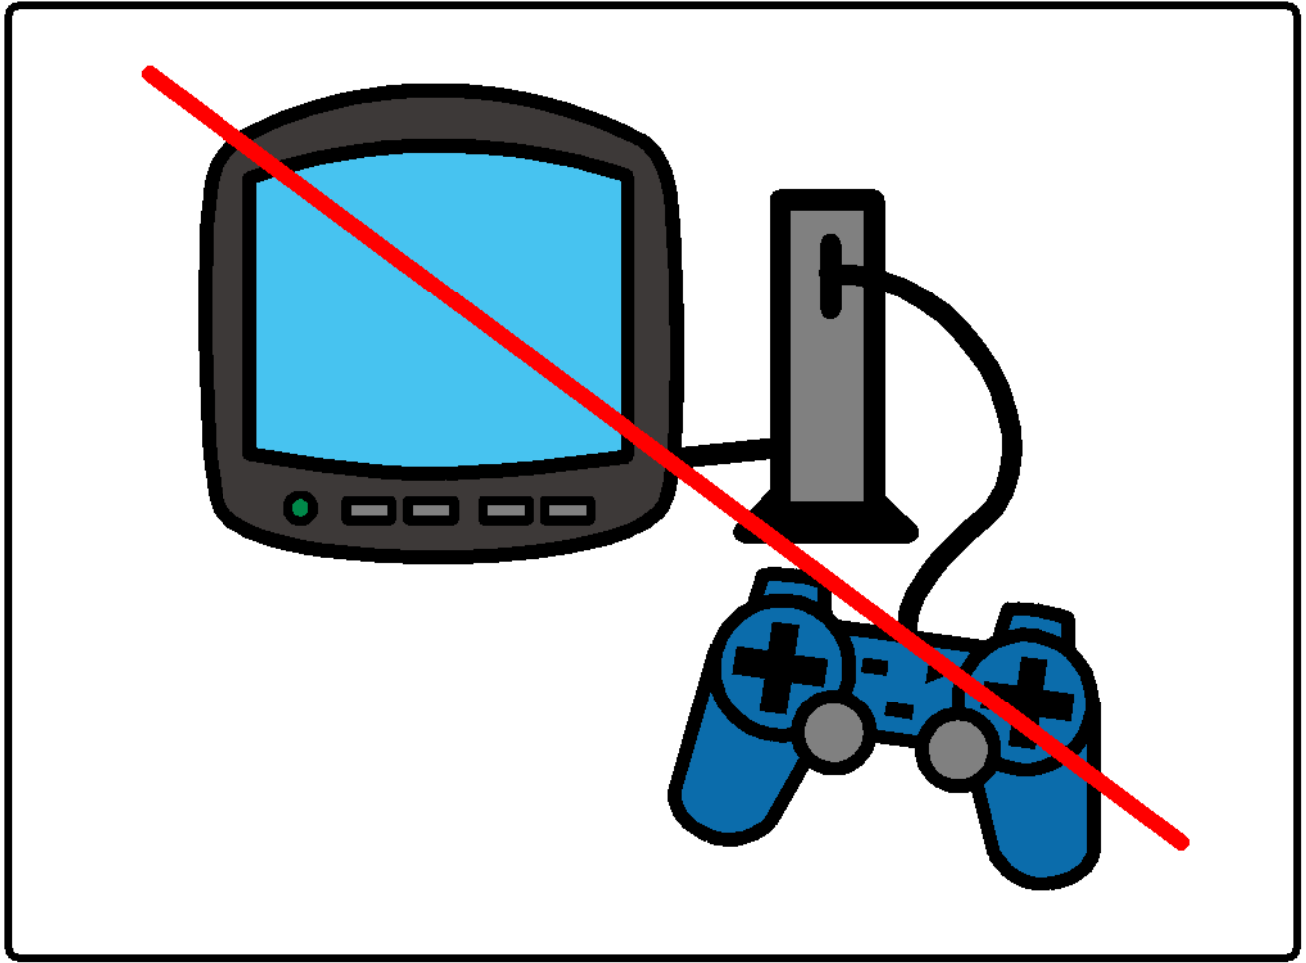

Many things can cause the power to go out. Usually it is caused by the weather. Strong winds, lightning, and ice storms are a few of the things that can damage the power lines.

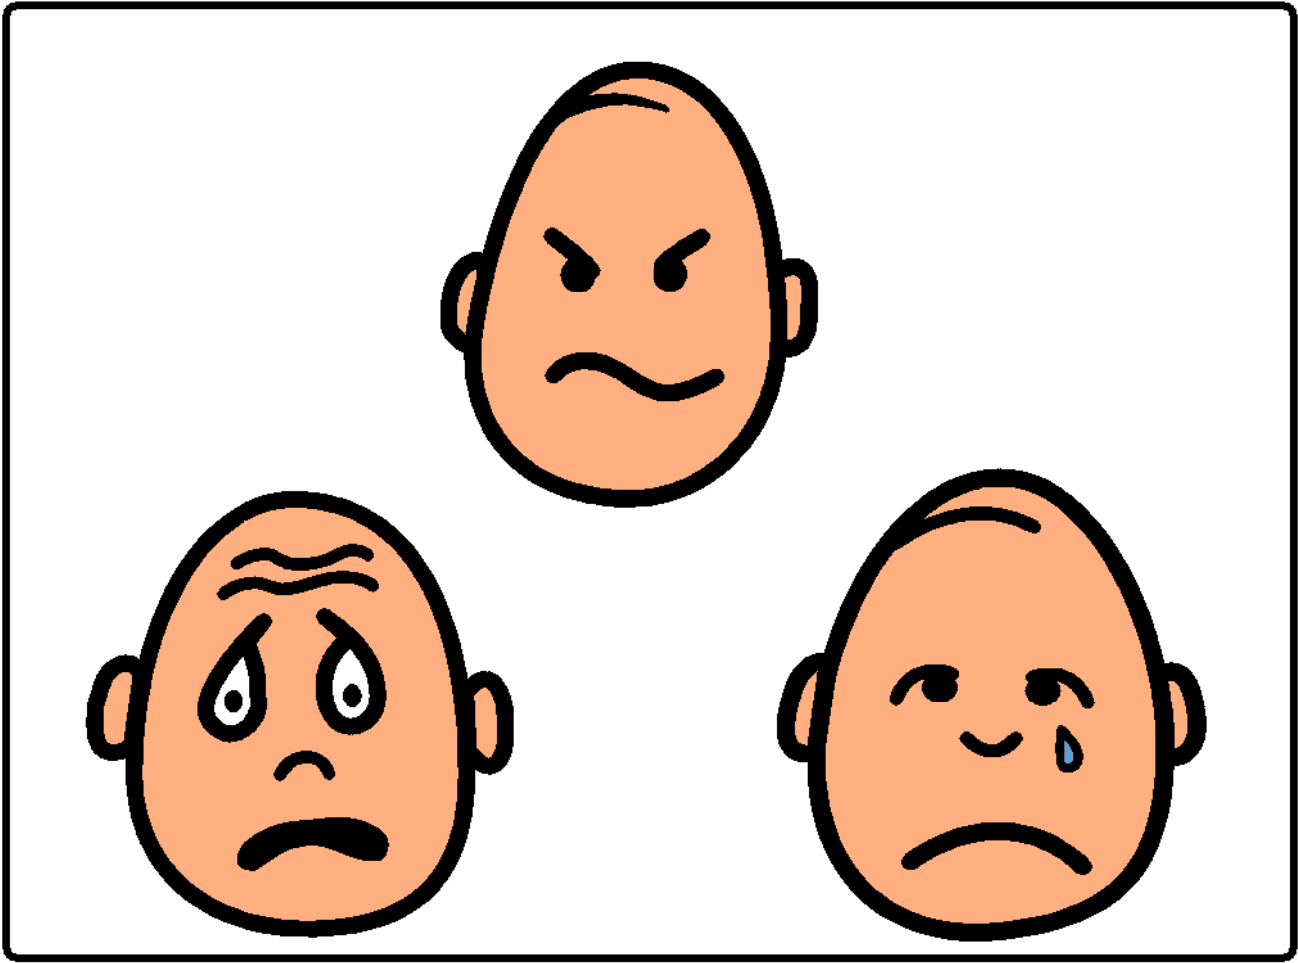

Sometimes a worker from the electric company may need to turn the power off to work safely on a power line.

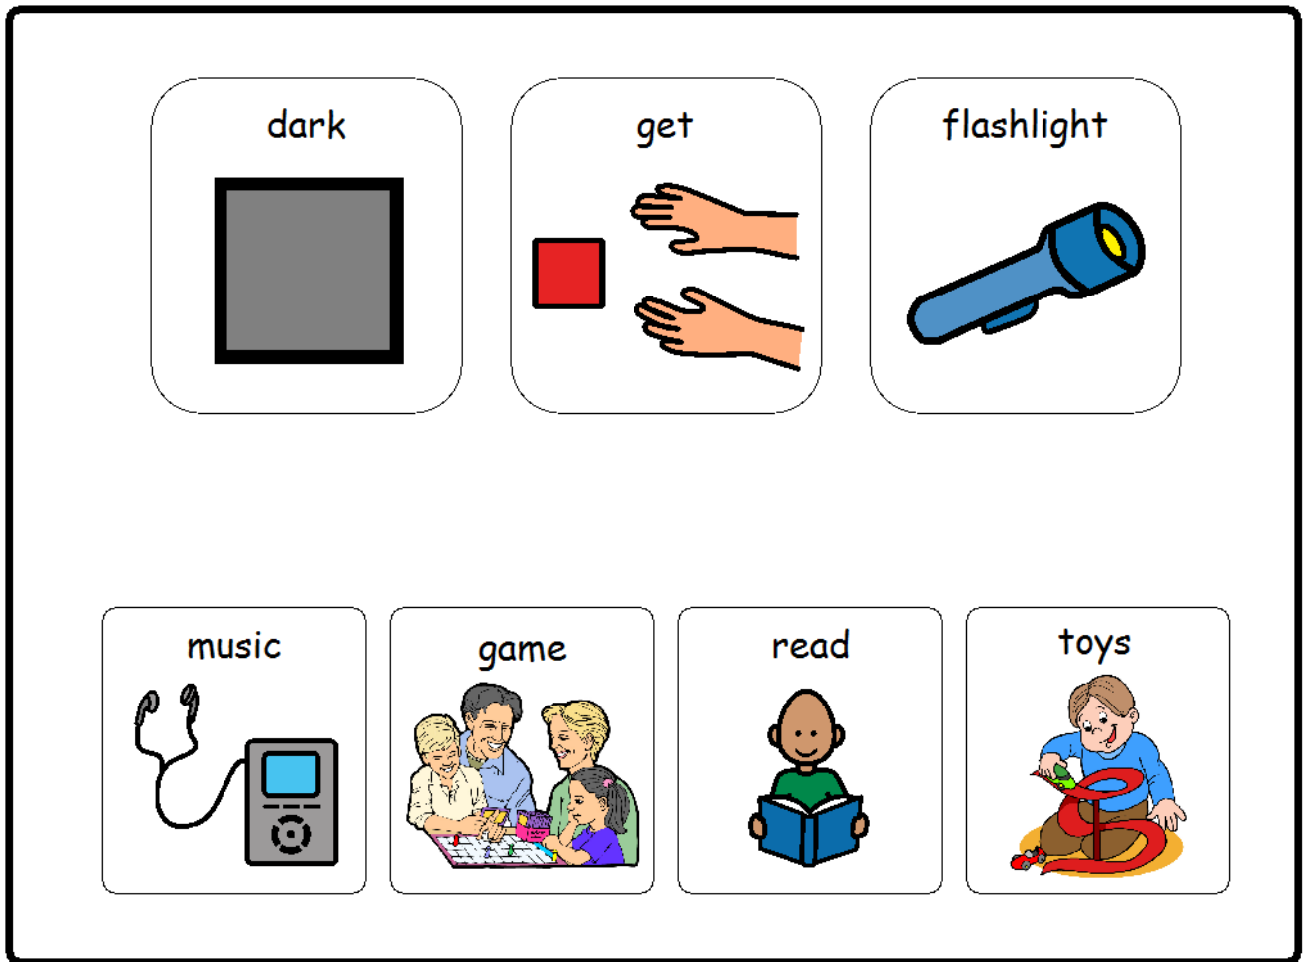

I don't know when the power will go out. I can not do anything to get it to come back on. My mom, dad or teacher can't make the power come back on either.

I might want to do something that takes electricity, but I will not be able to do it.

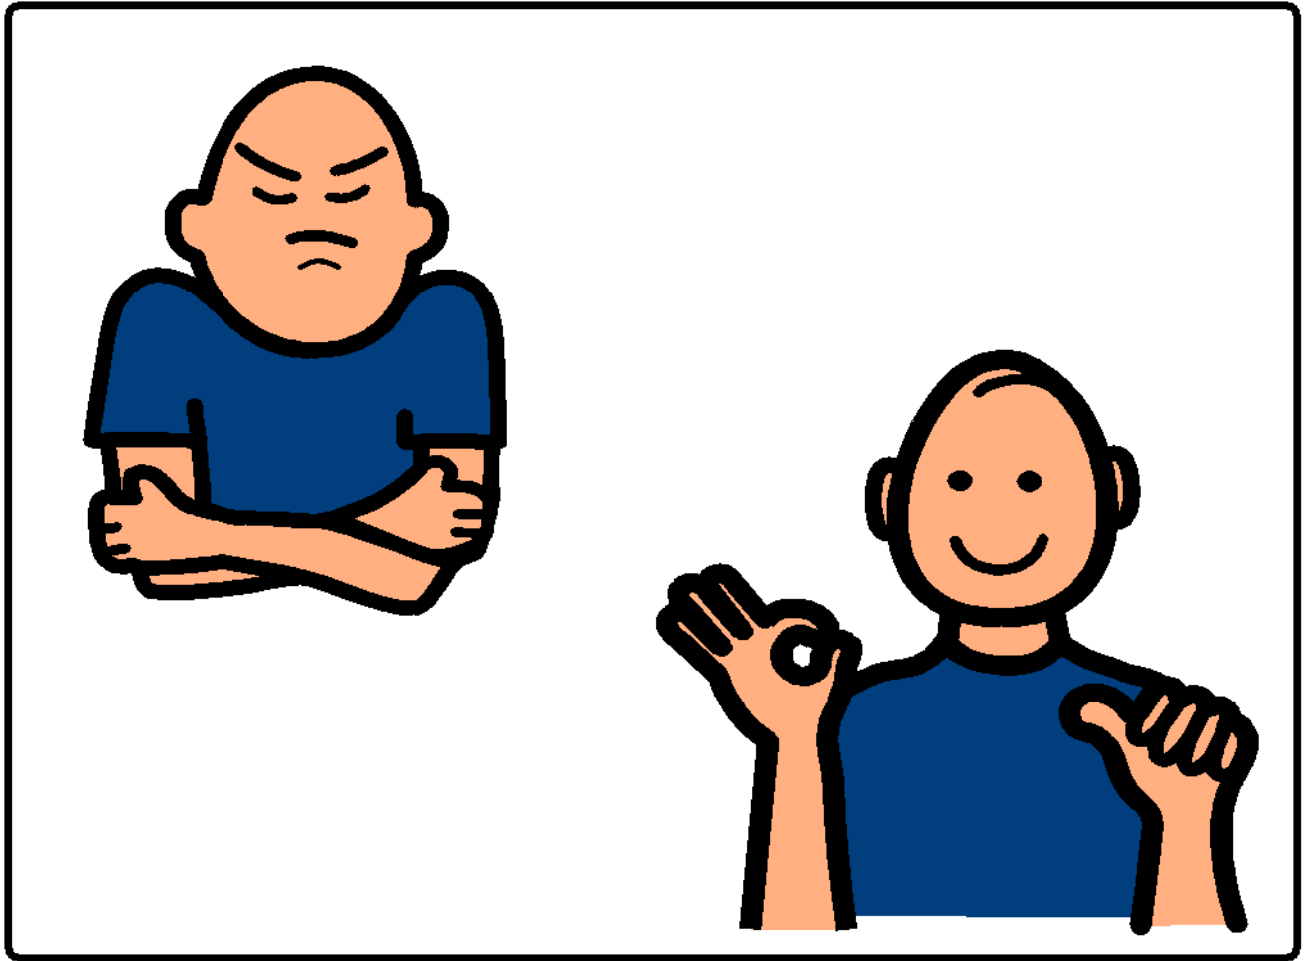

That might make me feel mad, scared, or sad. That is OK. I will try to stay calm and find things I can do.

If it is dark I can get a flashlight to help me see. I can listen to music, read a book, play a game, play with toys, color, and much more.

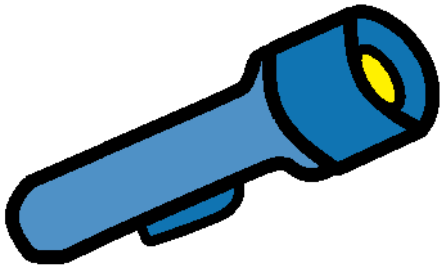

I don't know when the power will come back on. I do know that workers are trying to fix the power. They will have it fixed as soon as they can.

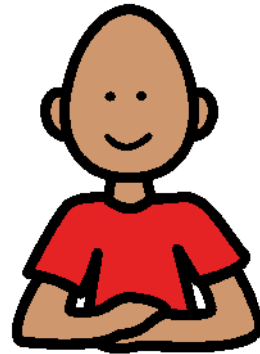

I might not like it when the power goes out, but I will find things to do while I wait for the electricity to come back on. I will be OK.
